SABR applauds reintroduction of legislation to reinstate Biodiesel Blenders Tax Credit

The Sustainable Advanced Biofuel Refiners (SABR) Coalition applauds Rep. Mike Carey and other sponsors for reintroducing legislation to reinstate the Biodiesel Blenders Tax Credit. This legislation is important because key elements of Section 45Z continue to create market uncertainty, including the lack of an updated GREET model that excludes the debunked theory of indirect land use change. SABR supports the bill as written and would suggest further refinements to Rep. Carey's bill that will prioritize domestic economic activity. Because this Biodiesel Blenders Tax Credit would be supported by U.S. tax dollars, the credit should directly benefit the domestic supply chain including U.S. producers, farmers, and feedstock suppliers. This biodiesel tax credit can provide immediate supply and pricing stability to volatile energy markets.

"We greatly appreciate Congressman Carey and his congressional colleagues for their leadership and awareness of the importance of reinstating the Biodiesel Blenders Tax Credit to reduce market uncertainty, strengthen our domestic supply chains and bring much-needed stability to energy prices," said SABR CEO Joe Jobe. "Energy security is national security, and biodiesel can provide solutions to many of the energy challenges we're currently facing."

About the SABR Coalition

Sustainable Advanced Biofuel Refiners (SABR) is a coalition of stakeholders that have invested in building out America's first advanced biofuel—biodiesel. SABR includes stakeholders from every link in the value chain from feedstock growers to biodiesel producers, distributors, retailers and consumers, as well as infrastructure, product and service providers.
